VI- Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

African wild dogs are different from pet dogs. They only have four toes, while domestic dogs and wolves have five. "Wild dogs are not somebody's domestic dogs that ran away and didn't come back, although some people used to think that," explains Dr. McNutt, who studies these animals at Wild Dog Research Camp in the African country of Botswana. "They are actually Africa's wolf, and just like wolves, they can't be pets". They run many miles every day and hunt to find the food they need to survive and feed pups.

In fact, African wild dogs travel so far that researchers use neck bands, which give radio signals, to keep track of them. African wild dogs are Lycaon pictus, which means painted, wolf-like animal. Roaming through grasslands, savannas, and wooded areas, they hunt gazelles, baby cows and small oxen, birds, and rats. Being incredible hunters, they can run up to 56 kilometres per hour.

African wild dogs are smart and sociable, like pet dogs. They enjoy each other's company and live in packs of about six to 20 animals. Both males and females look out for young dogs and make sure they have food. They like pups so much. They will even take care of orphan dogs.

African wild dogs communicate with two types of calls. "The 'hoo' call is a call that they make when lost." The dogs can hear the call 3 miles away and easily find each other. On the other hand, says Dr. McNutt, "The twitter calls are intended to carry only very short distances, and are used to wake up the pack members and rally them to go hunting."

There are fewer than 6,000 African wild dogs left on the planet. Lions and hyenas eat them. The bad weather conditions prevent them from hunting and might die of hunger. Moreover, Researchers warned people against losing this species. African wild dogs are threatened by people. Humans hunt them. Farmers, who don't want them going after cows and sheep, poison them. Humans are also destroying the wild, natural habitat they need to survive.
