VI- Reading Comprehension And Summary Making (70 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

There are many stories and myths about the camel spider. Some say that the camel spider can reach giant sizes. Other stories say that the camel spider injects a type of poison to eat huge chunks of flesh without being noticed. None of these stories are even half true! They don't eat big animals. Despite their reputation, camel spiders aren't actually very big at all. They are only about one to two inches long. They're thought to be like camels, but in fact they hate the sun. They don't go out in the day, but at night.

To begin with, the camel spider isn't even a real spider! The camel spider is also called a wind scorpion, sun spider or solifugid. Solifugids have eight legs, and two parts to their body. But unlike spiders, solifugids don't have a 'waist'. Also, although solifugids have eight legs, they only use six of them for walking. The first pair of legs is held out in front of them a little bit like antennae, so that they can feel their way and detect preys.

One of the biggest features of the solifugids is that they have huge jaws that stick out in front of them. Although camel spiders are meat eaters, they don't eat camels or people! They prey on other insects, scorpions, lizards and mice. Some solifugids eat only ants, and some eat whatever meat is around. To catch their prey, their speed and their huge jaws allow the camel spiders to catch their food.

There are about 600 different groups of solifugids. Most live in the hotter and drier areas in North Africa and the Middle East. Its desert habitat gives the camel spider its name; like a camel, this solifugid lives in the desert. Many solifugids look a bit like camels: They are hairy, and either yellow, brown, or black. These colours help them blend in with their environment.

The word solifugid comes from Latin, and means "running from the sun". This is because they are so fast, and also because solifugids are active at night. This means that they hide in holes in the sand or under rocks during the day and come out to hunt and move at night. Solifugids are very good at digging, and can build holes to stay in during the day and the breeding season. Although they run away from the sun, they are attracted to lights such as torches and fires.

A) From a, b, c and d, choose the correct answer: (6X6=36)

30. The best title for the passage could be.....

- a- eat
- b- find
- c- hate
- d- begin

33. The main idea of the 4th paragraph is.....

- a- the story of spiders.
- b- the body of spiders.
- c- the hair of camel spiders.
- d- the habitat of camel spiders.

34. is another name for the camel spiders.

- a- Mouse
- b- Lizard
- c- Torch
- d- Solifugid

35. One of the following ideas is NOT TRUE about camel spiders.

- a- They have eight legs and two body parts.
- b- They are attracted to the light of the sun.
- c- They live in the desert and the hot environment.
