Read the following passage then answer the questions below:

Italians know and love good food. It is part of their culture. Many Italians think that fast food is a terrible idea.

In 1986, something happened in Italy. An American fast food restaurant- a McDonald's- opened in Rome. Many Italians were surprised and angry. They thought this is an attack on Italian culture. A man called Carlo Petrini, decided to fight back. He started a group called Slow Food. Today about 70 milion people belong to the group. They live in forty five countries around the world. More people join every day.

The members of Slow Food have many ideas in common. There are a lot of problems with food today, they say. Fast food is one of them. For one thing it is not healthy food. Also, it is the same everywhere "that's boring" they say. They want to keep traditional cooking with all its variety.

Slow food members say "people should buy more local food. It is fresh, and it is part of our culture." One American , Gary Nabhan, decided to try this. For one year, all his food came from plants and animals near his home in Arisona. One local animal is the rattlesnake. He ate that too! In his book Comming Home to Eat, He says it tastes like chicken.

Fast food is reaching more and more parts of the world. But Slow Food is getting its message to more and more people too.
